OXFORD, Miss. - Bonnie and Robert Van Ness, professors of finance at the University of Mississippi, have been selected as managing editors for The Financial Review.

"This is going to be something new and unique within our careers," Robert said. "My wife and I have published over 50 journal articles, and this will give us the opportunity to deal with the publication perspective from the other side."

The official journal of the Eastern Finance Association, Financial Review is a general finance publication that encompasses all areas of finance and features research from varied perspectives. The journal includes empirical, theoretical and methodological research providing new insights into issues of importance in financial economics. It is ranked among the top 20 finance journals.

As managing editors, the Van Nesses will be taking on the task of reviewing submissions to the journal. The journal publishes around 30 articles and receives roughly 300 submissions annually.

"We will be making the final decision on which papers will be ultimately published by the journal," Robert said.

"We are the ones charged with putting it together and sending it to the publisher," Bonnie said.

The couple has been active in the Eastern Finance Association for the last six to eight years. A former editor of the Financial Review suggested that they submit a proposal for the editorship, and the husband-and-wife team jumped at the opportunity.

"We have been working together for so long that it just feels normal," Robert said.

Both the Van Nesses are looking forward to beginning their work on the publication. They officially take over as managing editors on July 1.
